Poppy is a corporation business run by students of Huntington High School, which offers a small, convenient bagel chip that is bought at a reasonable price. Together we work hard everyday to make sure our product is up to par. The chips are made from bagels that are leftover from stores and would have gone to waste. We have created a snack that decreases the amount of bagel waste on a daily basis. Fortunately, we have made connections to a factory that agreed to produce and bag our new product. We hope to give back to our environment by using bagels that delis or bagel stores would otherwise throw away at the end of the day, and transform them into bagel chips. Our business is run by CEO John Panos who is determined to make this company a future development by offering a variety of flavors that consumers will buy.
