Artist Interview with Charlie Daniels

Introduction:

Charles Edward Daniels (born October 28, 1936) is an American multi-instrumentalist, lyricist, and singer, known for his contributions to country, bluegrass, and Southern rock music. He is perhaps best known for his number-one country hit "The Devil Went Down to Georgia". Daniels has been active as a singer and musician since the 1950s. Today, he's here to do an interview with us.

Interview:

Carl: So you told taco bell that the illuminati was nothing to mess with?

Charlie: Well that's nothing to joke about, those people are really practicing what they're preaching.

Carl: Arguably your most popular song "Devil Went Down to Georgia" has a lot of references about the devil in it. The illuminati allegedly have devil worshipping rules. Is your song in any way related to these allegations?

Charlie: No. It is not really just a good ole bluegrass song.

Carl: You'll be in Nashville on March 7th. What are you looking forward to the most?

Charlie: Well, Nashville is always a great time for me so I'm expecting the same.

Carl: You're also known as a phenomenal fiddle player how did you get so good?

Charlie: Well some things you have to work for and sometimes you're just a prodigy. It just kind of came natural to me.

Spotlight Artist of the Month:

Sugarland

This spotlight artist this month is Sugarland. Sugarland once long lost is finally now coming back together. Jennifer Nettles recently confirmed that Sugarland will be a group again after disbanding in 2013. Each individual had great hits during their solo careers, but it will be exciting and refreshing to see them on stage together. Their first single off their new album is titled "Still the Same." They will also be headlining their first tour since being back together beginning this May.
